

Winter Cottage

LIVING ROOM

The open plan living room is 3.5m by 10m and unusually for a stone cottage is brick lined with a cavity between the bricks and the natural stone walls which makes for better insulation and no damp problem as usually associated with solid walls. The centre of the room is open to a galleried bedroom resulting in a very light and airy living space. The room is heated by two night store heaters and a multi fuel stove. A feature of the room is a granite "mill stone" set in the wall (apparently not a mill stone but used to crush apples for cider). There are two window seats with the land line phone next to one of them.
